PC 3: Information Technology (Theory and Practical) (all branches)

Duration: 2 hours

Maximum Marks: 100

Objectives:

1. To test IT Skills: This area would cover basic skills in word processing, electronic spreadsheets and presentation skills (in other words the basic MS Office suite). The thrust would be on assessing database handling skills. What is far more important and relevant today, is for the auditor to be able to adopt a database driven approach. The moment an auditor sees or uses data he should be able to visualise the data in a data structure. Most of the other skills will emanate from this skill of the auditor. Even today, it is not infrequent to find auditors using word processors for data. Even spreadsheet has its limitations while handling data. Most offices do not have a comprehensive database of auditee units with all the relevant attributes for carrying out a risk based selection of units – during the annual audit planning exercise. This is because offices have the auditee data scattered in word and excel files. An auditor with database handling skills would be able to address this issue. Likewise in Performance Audits (PAs) – guidelines include exhaustive data collection in spreadsheets. The information collected in spreadsheets from various offices has to be manually collated. An auditor with a data driven approach would be able to provide efficient and effective solution for this as well.

2. To test Skills required to audit in a computerised environment: This area would test skills on Data acquisition and import from the IT systems of the auditee.

3. To test IS Audit Skills: This area would test skills of the auditor in conducting IS Audit. The auditor ought to have clarity in regard to the distinction between IS Audit and use of IT for Audit.
